together for global health

Together, we are MEG

Health care is not something that everyone can take for granted. There are many places around the world where people still die because they don't have timely access to appropriate medical care. At MEG, we believe everyone should be able to get the help, medicines and supplies they need. Wherever they are, whenever necessary. Our clients save lives. And our job is to ensure our clients' needs are met.

It's a people thing.

Fulfilling our purpose calls for good working relationships with everyone involved. Getting things right for our clients starts with getting things right with our suppliers and our own employees.

This is the foundation of our expertise in complex supply chain. The result is unique solutions that allow our clients to excel in providing essential health care.

Attention to every detail.

At MEG, we view every fulfilled order as a contribution to a better world. Our clients know what's needed to deal with disasters and help those stranded in remote areas. We complement this with our ability to provide the necessary items and services, in a (cost-)effective manner.

Before we supply, we discuss. We listen very carefully to what our clients say. We challenge, we suggest and we confirm, to ensure everything is understood and nothing is overlooked. This way, all needs are properly identified and expectations are realistically managed. Our mastery of exploratory conversation ensures demand and supply are connected in the most meaningful way possible.

We call it co-creation.

We believe personal connections and attention to detail are the keys to successful outcomes.

We foster comfortable and caring working relationships, where we don't just get to know each other, but actively look out for each other. As an organisation, we are professional, driven, appreciate talent and allow room to grow. Because everything is ultimately about people.

We make it personal.
